Buyers are bombaraded by emails daily

10 years ago

Now

“I get 50–70 emails a day and I can't tell you how many emails I get where someone is trying to sell me something for an engineer or a Head of Product — roles that are just not applicable to what I'm doing.”

Nick Feeney

VP of Revenue at Loom

Master prospecting in 3 steps to find better leads and get bigger wins.

Who should I prioritize?

Master prospecting in 3 steps to find better leads and get bigger wins.

1

Who should I target?

2

Who should I prioritize?

3

How can I cut through the noise?

Step #1

Who should I target?

Build out your ideal customer profile

1. Pull a list of all your deals from the last 90-120 days and include all titles involved in the purchase.

Build out your ideal customer profile

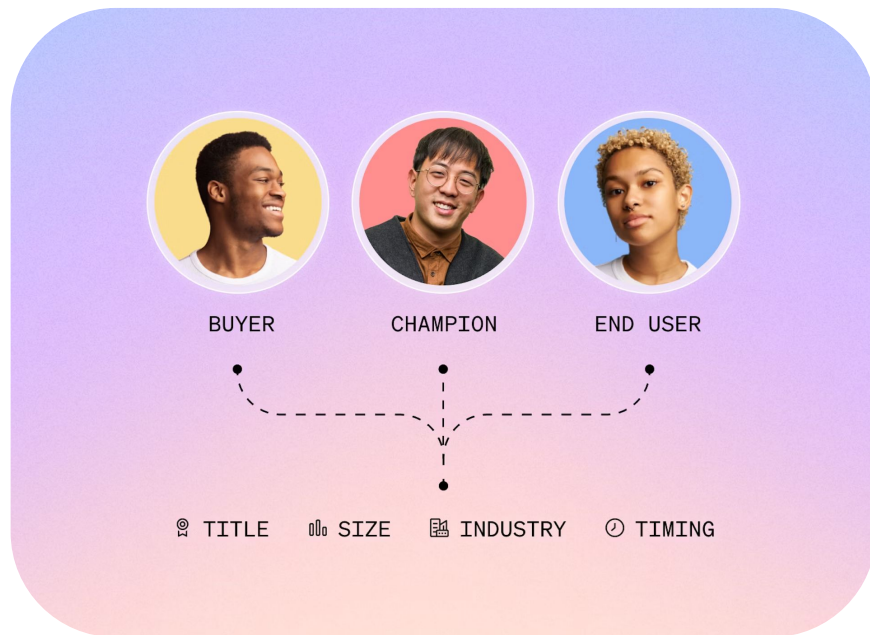

1. Pull a list of all your deals from the last 90-120 days and include all titles involved in the purchase.
2. Look for similarities in the data, including:
 - Job titles
 - Industry
 - Geography
 - Company size
 - Technologies or services used
 - Revenue

Bonus tip: turn your objections into insights and refine your ICP.

Buying isn't a single-player sport
– increase your deal value by multithreading
your deals

Nailing down your ICP means:

Higher reply rates

Shortened deal cycle

Better chance at a long-term partnership

Overall increase in efficiency and effectiveness

Step #2

Who should I prioritize?

Prospecting is a pyramid

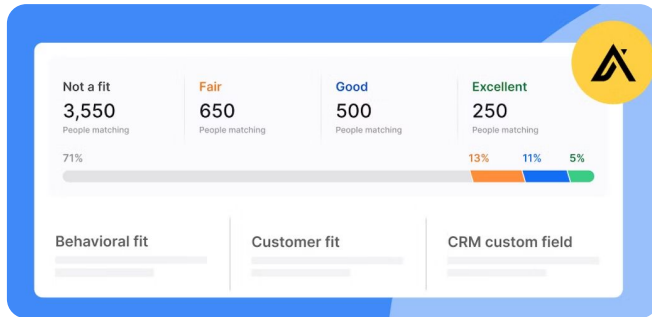

Focus most of your time on the 10% of leads that are in the market to buy

But how do I find the 10% of buyers?

Target your top opportunities with lead scoring

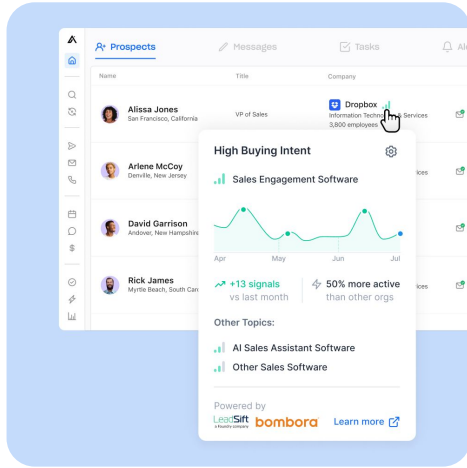

Lead Scoring Models

Automatically rank your leads by assigning “points” to specific attributes of each persona or ICP to get a strategically prioritized list of leads

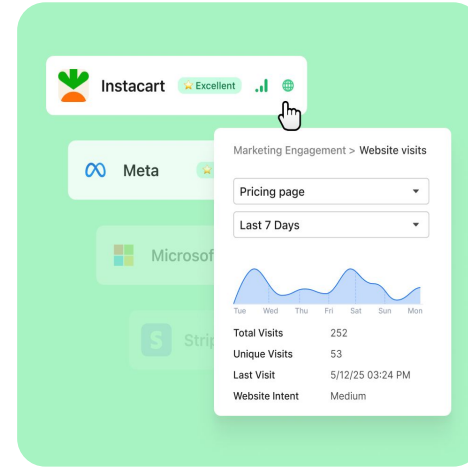

Prioritize your hottest opportunities with buying intent

Buying Intent

Leverage timely insights into the online intent-to-buy behaviors of your ICP to help you understand when to engage the right prospects from the right companies

Website Visitors Tracking

Use website activity to identify your hottest leads, see which companies visit, how often, unique visitor count, and viewed pages – even before they've converted

Step #3

How can I cut through the noise?

Conduct deep research on your prospects and understand their business

Right Messaging at the Right Time

Cut through the noise with personalized and relevant messaging

Build Relationships & a Business Case

Show prospects you understand their business and that you have a solution that can help them

Meet prospects where they are

Do these things before
you hit send:

Research the company

Research the prospect & persona

Research the industry

Personalize your messaging

Let's do it in Apollo

Building your ideal customer profile

Finding your hottest prospects

Researching your target audience
